Soon after the present Board was elected, a communication was received from the extensive publishing house of J. B. Lippincott & Co., of this city, inclosing an extract from a confidential letter addressed to the head of the firm, and which was in these words:—"When a boy, and not able to obtain books in any other way, I received much pleasure and instruction from those which were then loaned to me by the Apprentices' Library of Philadelphia. Success in life has not made me unmindful of early benefits, and I desire, in part, to pay back the debt I owe to the above Institution; I wish you, therefore, to furnish to the Trustees of the Apprentices' Library, books to the value of one thousand dollars, selected from the newest and best standard literature of the day."

This substantial tribute to the merits of our Institution, was promptly responded to by the Board in a series of resolutions, which, with the extract from the letter of our benefactor, have been printed and attached to each volume of the donation.

The Book Committee had been engaged at intervals in the agreeable occupation of making selections on account of this gift, when the Managers were gratified by the reception of more than two hundred volumes from the same liberal contributor, as a special donation to the Girls' Library. This increased the contribution to one thousand and eighty-five dollars, and the number of volumes to ten hundred and thirty-nine. All, except the two hundred and seven books last received, were arranged in one collection, and are accessible to both classes of our readers. Care has been taken for their preservation from dust, and an extra insurance has been effected for the purpose of protecting this cherished portion of our Library.

It has been a matter of honor with the Board, not to attempt to lift the veil by which the donor has so delicately concealed himself, but this act of magnanimity affords another evidence, that generous natures find in the acquisition of wealth the means of accomplishing noble aspirations. It is the covetous only who cling more closely to their possessions as they increase in magnitude; for the cravings of avarice can never be appeased.

The legacy of Elizabeth Greenfield, after a tardy legal process, has been but partially realized. An investment of five thousand dollars, principal and interest, has been made in City Loan, and a small dividend is expected on the final settlement of the estate. This bequest was intended to aid the Library Company in the erection of a building suited to its wants, and can be used for no other purpose, but it would be unwise to attempt such an enterprise until a sufficient amount is secured to pay the estimated cost, and to provide for every contingency. It is a principle with the Apprentices' Library Company to avoid the burden of a debt, unless it be the debt of gratitude, which we owe in an especial degree to those who hold in trust the venerable edifice which was founded by their fathers, a portion of which they have permitted us to occupy and enjoy. Through their liberality, we have been enabled to expend for books, an amount that would otherwise have been appropriated for rent, and two thousand volumes, at least, have thus been added to our collection.

This kindly feeling on the part of the Trustees and their associates, encourages the hope, that the room on the first floor may be placed at our disposal on terms that will be mutually satisfactory. The two Libraries approach each other so closely, that a separation has become indispensable to the judicious arrangement of our books. Should this desirable object be accomplished, we earnestly recommend to our successors, to open the Girls' Library every afternoon, and the Boys' every evening, whenever the state of the treasury will admit of the increased expenditure; additional facilities will multiply the number of readers, and thus extend the benefit of the Libraries.

Constant vigilance will be necessary on the part of the Managers, to maintain the requisite number of contributors. Various causes annually remove the names of many from the list, but there are others who will cheerfully take their places, and wait only to be invited.

The success of the Institution during the past year, is prolific of hope for the future ; and we surrender our trust, in the confidence that the Apprentices' Library will live on in the affections of our citizens, increasing in usefulness the more it is known and appreciated. It will become associated in the memories of its readers with those happy hours when they resorted thither to receive their portion of an inheritance more precious than gold, and which has been transmitted by gifted minds to the whole family of civilized man, unlimited by the law of entailment.

By order of the Board,

PHILIP C. GARRETT, Secretary.
